Two Reasonings

A well known Parisian antiquary while on his holidays in Normandy came across an old farm which had a curious carving in the form of an animal bearing over one of the stable doors. Beneath the carving was a wooden bar inscribed with a date, 1851, and it closely he found the latter to be 1061. All his antiquarian passions were aroused, needless to say, and after some bargaining the farmer sold him the carving for quite a nice price. The next day the farmer brought the trouvaille to the antiquary's villa. "This isn't what I bought!" exclaimed the purchaser. "It bears the date of 1801. I don't want it." "Excuse me, sir," replied the farmer, "it's the same, right enough. But the farmer who recently repaired it replaced the bar upside down, and I thought I ought to put it right for you." The antiquary was sporting enough not to go back on his bargain, but the facts of the case do not seem to speak highly of his antiquarian knowledge.—London Globe.

Pills For Nervous Troubles—The cause is the condition of the nervous system, and when the stomach suspends healthy action the result is manifest in disturbed action of the nerves. If allowed to persist, nervous debility, a dangerous ailment may ensue. The first step is to restore the stomach to proper action, and there is no readier remedy for this than Farnham's "Reliable Pills." Thousands can attest the virtue of these pills in curing nervous disorders.

Solid Grantee

The inquisitive traveler kept poking his head out the window of the car to the great annoyance of the conductor who several times stopped to warn him against the danger. At length he tapped the careless one on the shoulder and said: "Pardon me, but this time I must insist that you withdraw your head." Instantly the traveler drew his head back over his shoulder without complying with the request.

"Oh," said the conductor, nettled, "we are coming to a bridge, and I don't want any of the drivers damaged by your head."

And then the head came in.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Japan Censors Books

In Japan the censorship of novels is not exercised by the libraries but by a government official who is empowered to prosecute offending authors as well as forbid the sale of their books. Not long ago the author of a Japanese novel called "The Great City" was brought before the courts for giving too realistic a description of life in Tokio. His counsel made the old arguments about the indefeasible rights of literature and the annihilation of everything by art. But the case was given against the author. Even those of Moliere's works have been forbidden to circulate in Japan, the ground of offense being the lack of respect shown by writers toward their husbands and by sons toward their fathers.

Verlaine and the Burglars

According to a contemporary, a Parisian, seeing an old man about to give him a halfpenny, showed his contempt for the gift by taking a silver coin from his own pocket and bestowing it on the alms-giver. Let us hope the recipient fared better than Paul Verlaine did under somewhat similar circumstances. "One night the poet woke up to find a couple of burglars in his room. Shortly before he had been driven by poverty to sell every stick of furniture and was reduced to sleeping on a sack. His visitors were so touched by this evidence of dire poverty that they gave him a franc apiece and took their departure. "Unfortunately," Verlaine had to admit when he related the story to his friends, the coins were bad ones."—London Tatler.

Water From the Yangtze

There is a saying in China that to make a perfect cup of tea you must take leaves from Mingshan and water from the Yangtze. No one supposed the actual turbid river water to be meant, but no one can explain the proverb until Dr. Rossner, who wrote an interesting treatise on Chinese tea, solved the problem or thought he did.

Dr. Rossner was once crossing the Yangtze near its mouth at Chienkai when he saw some men in a boat dipping water into buckets. He inquired why they did that and was told that at the bottom of the bay there was a spring, remembered since the time when the present river bed was dry land, and that this spring water was highly esteemed in cooking. Here, then, he concluded, he had found that special water of the Yangtze which, with Mingshan leaves, made the best cup of tea in this world.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to little ones. The complaints of that season which are cholera infantum, diarrhoea and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is really ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to the mother during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It Shocked Dickens

Survivors of great railway accidents do not readily forget the experience. Charles Dickens did not, when on June 9, 1865, a train fell through the bridge at Staplehurst, England, and the carriage in which he was travelling, hung over the side. He acted with great coolness and courage, helping to extricate the wounded and then scrambling back to rescue the manuscript of "Our Mutual Friend." But, though unharmed, he never recovered from the shock. Afterward, when travelling, as his daughter relates, "he would often suddenly fall into a paroxysm of fear, clutch the arms of the railway carriage, large beads of perspiration standing on his face and utter agonies of terror." Dickens died on the anniversary of the accident five years later.

A Stir at the Culinary

"It's a pity there weren't cooking schools in the time of Adam and Eve."

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. True, relief may be obtained by the use of powerful opiates but the shock to the nerves is tremendous and the result a further weakening of the system.

To really cure headache it is absolutely necessary that the exhausted nerves be restored and re-vitalized. This can best be accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The benefits are both certain and lasting, for by building up the system the cause of trouble is removed.

Mr. Charles Donner, Kleinburg, Ont., writes:—"I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I have received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from headaches for over two years. I took medicines from physicians and yet the headaches persisted and I was rarely free from them. About a year ago, I saw one of Dr. Chase's Medicine Books, and I thought I would try his Nerve Food. I did so, and I must confess with very little faith, but after I had taken a box, my headaches were easier, and after I had taken two boxes they left me. My appetite was always poor and my stomach was bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but now not only have I been cured of all them, but my strength is growing once more, and I feel like a new man. I am exceedingly grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for curing me. I give this testimonial with great pleasure as I hope thereby some other sufferer from headaches will be induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and will be cured."

Salt and Fresh Water Lakes

Fresh water lakes are always only expansions of rivers, due to the particular topographical configuration of a valley. They are all characterized by the fact that the water that they receive runs out either continuously or intermittently and that the chemical constitution of their water remains constantly the same as that of the streams and rivers of the same region. Salt lakes, on the other hand, are always closed basins, without outlet, and their water is removed only by surface evaporation. Three facts being well understood, we see at once why the former lakes contain fresh water and the others salt water. Water is nature's great solvent. Hardly a single substance, simple or compound, escapes its dissolving action. Consequently the water that flows over the earth's surface or in its denser contents continually in solution substances that finally accumulate in the water. In the case of fresh water, whose mass, removed only by evaporation, becomes more and more charged with saline matter.

Constant Headaches From Exhausted Nerves

Appetite Poor—Digestion Bad—Daily Grow Weaker—Lost Faith in Medicine

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. True, relief may be obtained by the use of powerful opiates but the shock to the nerves is tremendous and the result a further weakening of the system.

To really cure headache it is absolutely necessary that the exhausted nerves be restored and re-vitalized. This can best be accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The benefits are both certain and lasting, for by building up the system the cause of trouble is removed.

This has been proven in many thousands of cases and we cannot do better than quote here the letter from Mr. Donner, who suffered almost constantly from headaches for two years. Doctors did their best to cure him but in vain. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food made a perfect cure because it removed the cause.

FIRE ALARM.

An alarm of fire was raised on Monday afternoon, and luckily there was a fair number of men in the town at the time, three or four autos a number of buggies, Ivor Lewis's dray crowded with men and one of the chemical engines attached behind were quickly on their way at full speed. The alarm came from Mr. J. Reid's about one and a half miles from town, luckily they had the telephone in and made good use of that instrument in calling for aid as soon as the outbreak was discovered the two nearest neighbours, and a call to the Fire Brigade.

Mr. Shaw and Mr. Casey and the first auto from town arriving within five minutes of the call. The first arrivals got quickly to work with pails of water and soon got the outbreak under.

It appears that the cook stove had been out some time but the stove pipe must have got too hot and started the surrounding woodwork, and probably helped by the hot sun it soon got hot. Luckily there was very little wind, and what there was happened to be from a quarter that had little effect on the fire, the higher building saving the lean to where the fire had originated. By the time the last auto got there the fire was about over and very little damage had been done.

Mr. Reid may be very thankful the phone was on hand and it took place in the day time. We shudder to think what it would mean if a fire started anywhere in the dead of night.

MEN and Women too think! Isn't it time something was done to try to get a night service on the phone.

A party of ten journeyed to Innisfail to play a game of cricket on Wednesday we tried two or three of them to get the score. All we can glean was that Crossfield got 52 and Innisfail 55 in the first innings.

We have a communication from a friend out west who suggests that someone gives the harnessmaker an order for leather medals for the Dog Pound baseball boys, who are getting quite jubilant. He goes on to say the Crossfield boys are kind of disappointed they didn't get them, but they might have wooden spoons.

McShane's Obituary Is O. K. But It's Not Needed Yet.

Occasionally the premature announcement of the death of a prominent man gives the subject the rare opportunity of "vindicating" his own obituary. A recent case was the obituary graphic despatch to the London "Times" stating that Sir James Whitney was dead, which has embroiled two Toronto dailies in counter libel suits. Sir James Whitney, a well known lot of but few men to not only persevere but to revise the biography which recited their virtues and their achievements for the information of their surviving fellow-mortals, but this was the unique privilege of Hon. James McShane, affectionately known as "the people's Jimmy," and whose public career has included terms as alderman and Mayor of Montreal, minister in the Quebec Cabinet, and member of the House of Commons. Some half-dozen years ago Mr. McShane was dangerously ill, and his advanced years and critical condition were such that death was imminent. Mr. Austin Mosher, a veteran journalist who knew everybody who was anybody in the Eastern half of Canada, was instructed to prepare for his newspaper, the Montreal "Gazette," a voluminous sketch of Mr. McShane's life.

Mr. Mosher did so, but Mr. McShane made an unexpected and rapid recovery, and some two or three weeks later Mr. Mosher met the consolation of some of his friends and colleagues appropriate to the occasion had been exchanged. Mr. Mosher exclaimed:

"By the way, Jimmie, I have your obituary I see."

"Have you?" said Mr. McShane in an interested tone. "Well, come in here and I'll take a look at it."

They entered the place designated, and Mr. McShane, resting one foot on the brass rail, scanned the manuscript closely, changing a word here and there, and eliminating an occasional phrase, and inserting a sentence or two. Finding it back he remarked:

"Hang it all, man, you hadn't done me justice at all. But it's not done now, and when I die, see that it gets in the way I've given it to you."

The obituary, as marked O. K. by the subject thereof, is still in the "Gazette" archives awaiting its ultimate purpose. There seems, however, no immediate prospect of it being called into use, for Mr. McShane is still hale and hearty at eighty, and in the municipal campaign last April he took an energetic part on behalf of Major Stephen's candidature for the mayoralty, delivering one to three speeches every night for two weeks. —Toronto Saturday Night.

Antiquities. In the West.

Mr. Martin Harvey, in an address before the Women's Branch of the Antiquarian Society of Montreal, made an eloquent plea for the preservation of old buildings and other historic landmarks connected with the early days of Canada. He predicted the serious portion of his address with some humorous comment.

"Perhaps the only regret that I felt when embarking on my present Canadian tour," said Mr. Harvey, "was that for several months I would be out of touch with those opportunities for antiquarian study and a necessary part of my daily life I found, however, that I was mistaken, and that antiquarianism is after all, only a relative term. One day, as we were being motored through one of those magnificent young cities of your West, I said to the leading citizen, who was the conductor:

"What is that large brick building on our right?"

"That building?" he rejoined. "Oh, that's the old Normal school, built about eight years ago. I'll show you the new one further on."

The lingering emphasis which our guide placed on the word "old" impressed me greatly, and I realized that after all it was once more in close association with my beloved hobby of antiquarianism.

Protestant Schools Fall Off.

In 1902 there were 399 Protestant elementary schools in Quebec, and "1913 this number had fallen to 329. The pupils in 1902 numbered 27,693, and 1913 totalled 25,495. The city of Montreal accounted for 18,559 of these.

The number of Protestant pupils attending Roman Catholic elementary schools in 1912 was 453. The Roman Catholics attending Protestant elementary schools was 1,748; 378 Protestant pupils attending Roman Catholic elementary schools, and 185 Roman Catholics attending Protestant elementary schools. The total attendance at all Protestant schools of all kinds in 1912, and Catholics attending Protestant schools, 2,118.

Thought He Knew Philosophy.

Herbert Spencer was advised by a physician to mingle more with people, but as he despised "sociology" as utterly insane this philosoher, who will be known as long as the earth exists, went to an ordinary English boarding-house, from which a young woman clerk wrote to her mother, "The man who talks like this is a man of old simplicity who thinks he knows something of philosophy, but he does not know right every time he talks at the dining table."

AFRICAN WILD DOGS.

Hunt In Packs and Even Attack Human Beings.

The famous wild dogs of South Africa are built on the same model and show the most marvelous intelligence in bringing down the fiercest game.

They are strong, powerful creatures, measuring about two feet in height at the shoulder, and having long and slender limbs. The head is particularly remarkable that of the hyena, the muzzle being pointed and black, and the ears large and prominent. The tail is moderately long and bushy.

These wild dogs are true hunters, the packs sometimes numbering several hundred individuals, seeming to be governed by a regular system of espionage. When at rest about the hollows and caves in the rocks in which they live certain ones act as sentinels, lying on the outskirts of the pack, watching for game.

BRITISH M.P.'S SPEECHES.

How They Are Preserved in Classic Westminster.

With the regularity of the morning milk can, gray covered booklet of the speeches of M.P.'s in the previous night is delivered to the London home of every member of Parliament. This is the official record of the proceedings of the House of Commons. The workmanship of this valuable booklet is perhaps the best of all the vast multitude of Parliamentary publications. It represents, says E. A. J., in The Daily Citizen, the output of an army of reporters, typists, compositors, proofreaders, machinists and bookbinders. An editor, an assistant editor, and no fewer than twelve reporters—perhaps the finest shorthand writers in the United Kingdom—participate in the production of this official report. When, after prayers—a few minutes before three o'clock—there is a quiet interval, the editor and his colleagues take up on the shoulder and takes up the notes. Here a start of typists await and then their colleagues take up on the shoulder and takes up the notes. RAVAGES OF BEETLES.

How Famous Roof of Westminster Hall Is Being Destroyed.

More than a hundred years ago a foreman carpenter, designing the hammer beam roof of Westminster Hall for the king's banqueting hall in 1397, charging six shillings a day for his services. It was saved enough, and his fee was five shillings. For other five hundred years but for the Westminster beetle. The Westminster beetle has been eating its way into the wall posts, and the posts above the hammer beams will one day scoop out the rotten wood by the handfuls, and the whole arched edifice is sinking by inches, says a London Journal.

Needless to say, the beetle is eating into other parts of the oak beams the beams we have mentioned. Neither purlin, nor the longitudinal struts which form the side arches, nor the fine Gothic tracery and carving are spared to this infamous parasite; but the wall posts and hammer beams and posts are principally mentioned because on them lies the work of supporting the hammer beam roof; and also because some of these great timbers have suffered most from the invasions of the larvae of the beetle. It is almost impossible to stand inside the wall cavities. The arched hammer beam roof is like an inverted A with a box for the beetle to creep into, and the beetle is at the apex. Imagine a line drawn like a cross-bar through the wall posts, and the beetle will report the big A at the apex. Imagine a line drawn like a cross-bar through the wall posts, and the beetle will report the big A at the apex.

CROSSFIELD, ALTA., JULY 30, 1914.

Charge of Forgery at Crossfield.

At the Crossfield Fire Hall, on Monday morning before E. H. Morrow, J.P., Charles Baxter was charged with forging to obtain money by means of a forged cheque for $75.

Constable A. G. Birch of the N.W.M.P., stated that on Saturday, July 25th, he received a message from the bank to go there as there was a man trying to cash a cheque which Mr. Bray thought to be a forgery, and after looking at the cheque and other documents arrested defendant.

Baxter made the following statement: "Well I may as well own up to this, I did it because I was hungry, it will save trouble, and anyhow Cameron would identify me as I worked for him at Gleichen, I tried the same up at Calgary and would have got the money had it not been for the fact I had drawn my cheque on the Crossfield Branch instead of the Gleichen Branch."

Mr. Bray, Manager of the Crossfield Branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and on the morning of July 25th, Charles Baxter, representing himself as Fred Jones, presented a letter of introduction which he stated was from Mr. James Cameron, manager of the Gleichen Branch. The signature on the letter was not Mr. Cameron's, nor was the signature on the cheque posted in Calgary addressed to the bank at Crossfield, which the letter of introduction stated had been forwarded to the bank. On the morning of the 25th, July the accountant of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Calgary telephoned that a man answering the description of Chas. Baxter had endeavored to cash a forged cheque in Calgary. He informed Baxter that he intended having him arrested on a charge of forgery. Constable Birch was phoned for and arrested the defendant.

On being asked if he had any questions to ask witness, Baxter denied that he endeavored to cash the cheque. He stated that the cheque had been forwarded and he wished them to pay it.

J. W. McIntosh, clerk at the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Crossfield, on Saturday morning the 25th July, I was summoned into the manager's office, where I was shown a letter supposed to be written by Mr. Cameron, manager of the bank at Gleichen, and which was presented to Mr. Bray by "Fred Jones." Mr. Bray informed me that he was suspicious that this was a forgery and wished him to look through the mail to see if a cheque had arrived, he found a cheque that had been sent by mail from Calgary. He recognized the letter and in evidence as a letter of introduction from Cameron, also the letter that was received by mail with the cheque from Calgary.

Mr. Cameron, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Gleichen, said on Saturday morning, July 25th, Mr. Bray, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Crossfield, phoned to me at Gleichen and informed me that he had had a man arrested going by the name of Fred Jones, for trying to receive money by a forged cheque and letter. Later he was phoned by Constable Birch asking him if he could be here on Monday. He recognized prisoner as Charles Baxter. He had worked for him three months more or less at Gleichen, during the time he worked for him he found he was reliable and honest, he placed considerable trust in him, at times leaving him in charge of his house, to his knowledge that trust was not violated in any way, as work on Gleichen was scarce, and repaying him as capable and reliable he obtained for him the position of janitor of the branch at Highland and found him the money for his expenses to take up his duties there. On Friday, July 24th the accountant of the Gleichen branch advised from Calgary that a man named Fred Jones was trying to obtain money by means of a letter and cheque purporting to be signed by me, he informed him that same must be forged, and requested him to have the man arrested.

Charles Baxter on having the charge read over to him by Justice Morrow, asked if he had anything to say, replied that Mr. Bray's statement with respect to his trying to receive payment for the cheque was wrong, it went through the mail, he had already given himself up to Mr. Bray.

Baxter was sent to Calgary to await his trial.
